

Valuations

To obtain a valuation for your porcelain, it is best to consult a licensed auctioneer or specialist antique dealer who will be able provide a valuation for insurance, sale or probate. In most cases they will need to see the object in question or a good photograph of it.

In line with all British Museums, the Worcester Porcelain Museum is not licensed to provide valuations and cannot comment on value under any circumstances.

The following list is not a recommendation; further names and addresses can be found in your local telephone directory and web sites usually give further details.
